JACKSON SEEKS RELEASE OF KIDNAPPED AMERICANS

Rev. Jackson with Lucille Levin, wife of Jeremy Levin, who was kidnapped March 7, and Rev. Herbert Daughtry of Brooklyn.

The Rev. Jackson said yesterday that he was considering making another trip to the middle East this time to seek the release of three Americans kidnapped by gunmen on the sidewalks of Beirut.

Mr. Jackson said he did not know who was holding the hostages or where they were. "But we have reason to believe that they are alive," he said. "I'm willing to beleive that they are alive," I'm willing to go there if there's any likelihood that we can gain their release."

Jackson flew to Rome from New York as part of a nine day trip to Europe which will also include a visit to London. He plans to meet with Pope Paul II in Rome and with activists involved in the Nuclear Freeze and Anti-Apartheid Movements in London.

Two other Kidnapped Americans are William Buckley, the Political officer of the United States Embassy, who was abducted March 7. And the Rev. Benjamin M. Weir, a Presbyterran Minister kidnapped while walking with his wife on March 8.

While in Europe, Mr. Jackson said, he will talk with people from the Middle East to assess the possibility of talks to gain the release of the Americans

He would not elaborate on who the Middle East contacts were or whether they included government officials or informal intermediaries with governments in the Middle East.

"All I can say is that we seek to talk with the right people," he said.

"We want to open up a window of opportunity."

Also present at the news conference was Marilyn Goodman, mother of Lieut. Robert Goodman of the Navy, who was released from captivity in Syria after Mr. Jackson, then a Democratic Presidential candidate went there in January 1984.

The State Department believes that the kidnappings were the work of a faction of the Party of God, a militant pro-Iranian Shiite group operating in Lebanon.

The group is also believed to be responsible for the bombing attacks at the United States Embassy and Marine barracks in Lebanon.

The civil rights leader said he would embark if possible on a "spiritual" mission to persuade those who are holding the americans to release them on "moral" grounds.

Hooks Seeks Famine Relief Through Black American Groups

Benjamin L. Hooks, NAACP executive director, issued a special appeal to black Americans to aid famine victims in Africa. Through the NAACP, he said, "we must galvanize our efforts in five key areas" to ensure that:

The black community sustains its interest in the African situation.

The larger American community sustains its interest and support.

The American government sustains its interest and support.

Developed nations sustain their interest and support for African development.

The black community work more directly and effectively with black African governments in enlisting support among Americans for solutions to African problems, as well as work with and through African organizations such as the Organization of African Unity

Mr. Hooks outlined the NAACP's plans at a meeting with more than 25 representatives of black churches, fraternal and other organizations at the NAACP's headquarters in Brooklyn on Friday, December 14. Attending the meeting also were Abdelrahim Dirar, assistant executive secretary of the organizaiton of African Unity's Mission to the United Nations, and Dr. Joseph C. Kennedy, director of International Development programs. Also attending were representatives from the United States Committee for UNICEF.

Following a two-hour meeting, the group agreed to ask organizations to donate or increase their contributions for African famine relief.

They stressed that donations should be in cash only and not goods. Individuals should also contribute through their respective organizations, which would receive and disburse those funds to such agencies as Africare.

Walker Named Education Minority Vice Chair

State Rep. - elect Sally W. Walker, R-Tacoma, has been appointed minority vice chair of the House Education Committee.

Walker, elected to the state Legislature in November, says she is thrilled with the assignment because it is on the committee she wanted. The appointment came this week from the House Republican Caucus leadership.

"I am not a professional educator, I haven't been a school admininstrator and I haven' t served on school boards so perhaps I'll bring a fresh approach to the committee," she said.

While not having served in the above roles, Walker has long been active in school affairs. She has had children in schools for the last 29 years. During that time she has worked in parent teacher associations, served as a parent representative on a Curtis High School standards comittee and has worked closely with schools while serving as a commissioner on University Place Parks and Recreation Board. She resigned the board position after winning election to the Legislature.

"Small business, crime prevention and environment all concern residents of the 28th Legislative District, yet education seeems to be the overriding priority. People want the quality of education raised and they want to see the education dollar spent as wisely as possible," Walker said.

"On the committee, I hope we can take the very fine recommendations from the various studies and implement those that do not cost a lot. Some of the recommendations are expensive and I'm afraid people will be disappointed because the money isn't there. I don't want people to feel it's all for naught. We will chip away until we finish the task but it won't be all in one session," she said.

"Introduction To Residential Model Conservation Standards"

The City of Tacoma's Energy Office will present an introduction of the Tacoma Utilities Light Division's new service standards for electrically heated new homes.

The rational for the new standards will be discussed, along with methods of compliance and construction techniques in use, which comply with the standards. A question and answer period will be included.

Builders, designers, subcontractors, realtors, lenders, and the general public are invited to attend this informational meeting on January 23, 1985, at the Tacoma Public Utilities Building, 3628 South 35th Street, in the auditorium, from 7:00 to 9:00 PM.

"Presidential" Or Parliamentary Style

United Press International

Considers himself a new type of Japanese leader.

Over lunch with American reporters at his official residence last week, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone suddenly began talking about his personal political style. It is "presidential" rather than "parliamentary," he said.

Whether he is indeed "presidential" is debatable.

Mr. Nakasone who is to meet with President Reagan in California on Wednesday, must abide by the painstaking requirements of consensus-building as much as his predecessors. The point, however, is that he regards himself as a new type of Japanese leader and, perhaps more important, many other people agree.

In slightly more than two years in office, Mr. Nakasone has made for eign policy his principal strength, defying a conventional wisdom that Japanese Prime Ministers get into trouble when they stray too far from domestic politics.

How Mr. Nakasone conducts himself in California could have an impact on his standing back home.

Corporate Forum On New Smoking Ordinance

Smoking in public will become even more restrictive beginning January 15, 1985, in unincorporated areas of Pierce County. The Pierce County Council passed the smoking ordinance, #84-155, by a vote of 7-10 with strong support from the American Lung Association of Washington, the Medical Society of Pierce County, the Tacoma-Pierce County Health Department, FANS (Fresh Air For Nonsmokers), and many individual supporters.

The new law, modeled after San Francisco's and drafted by Tacoma attorney Jeff jahns, applies to the workplace sa well as public places. Employers are required to adopt and post a written smoking policy which provides a method of accommodating nonsmoking employee preferences. If such accommodation is not possible, smoking shall be prohibited in that area.

"Is It A Dream?" Pope Ask

"Is it a dream?" the Pope asked about disarmament as he brandished the text of his speech for emphasis. "No, It's my earnest appeal for all of you, to the peoples of all continents and to the youth of the world."

The Pope's remarks on the talks between Secretary of State George p. Shultz and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko were unusually direct in their references to current affairs.

The talks, scheduled for next Monday and Tuesday in Geneva, are to cover ground rules and an agenda for a new set of arms control talks.

WORDS OF WISDOM

HAVE YOU BELIEVE OUR REPORT?

SERIES #47

ISAIAH 53: 1&2

Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a root out of dry ground.

He hath no form nor comiliness: and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

PROVERBS 24: 21

Be not thou envious against evil men, neither desire to be with them.

For their heart studieth destruction, and their lips talk of mischief.

Through wisdom is an house builded; and by understanding it is established:

And by knowledge shall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant riches.

a wise man is trong; yea, a man of knowledge inceaseth strengh.

for by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war: and in multitude of counsellors there is safety.

wisdom is too high for a fool: he openeth not his mouth in the gate.

He that deviseth to do evil shall be called a mischievous person.

The thought of foolishness is sin: and the scorner is an abomination to men.

If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small.

If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death, and those that are ready to be alain;

If thou sayest, Behold, we knew it not; doth not he that pondereth the heart consider it? and he that keepeth thy soul, doth not he know it? and shall not he render to every man according to his works?

My son, eat thou honey, because it is good; and the honeycomb, which is sweet to thy taste:

So shall the knowledge of wisdom be unto thy soul: when thou hast found it, then there shall be a reward, and thy expectation shall not be cut off.

Lay not wait, O wicked man, against the dwelling of the righteous; spoil not his resting place:

For a just man falleth seven times, and riseth up again: but the wicked shall fall into mischief.

Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth:

Lest the Lord see it, and it displease him, and he turn away his wrath from him.

Fret not thy self because of evil men, neither be thou envious at the wicked;

For there shall be no reward to the evil man; the candle of the wicked shall be put out.

My son, fear thou the Lord and the King: and meddle not with them that are given to change:

Keep In Touch!

Church members are people with certain specific functions to perform. They are there to worship and serve wherever their talents permit them to. But they are only people - with all the feelings and emotions of human beings - not machines. Pastors who remember this - and show it in their attitude and actions - will produce better results than those who don't.

Pastors don't like to be taken for granted, and members don't either. If wholehearted, eager cooperation is what is expected from the membership, then it's wise to recognize this fact.

People like attention - they work better when they get it. Faced with serious problems or a heavy schedule, some pastors tend to ignore people and only concentrate on what things they want done. The smarter way is to concentrate on people and keep them in mood to really accomplish something.

It doesn't pay to be so busy that you lose touch with your people. Good pastors always find time - one way or another - to make the rounds, chat with people, show an interest in them and their problems, listen to their ideas. It isn't just a nice thing to do - it's vital.

The faster and more continuously a machine has to operate, the more careful a good mechanic is to lubricate it generously. The same principle applies to people. Interest and attention are just as important to people as grease and oil are to a machine. Without it they don't run smoothly, never reach top speed, and break down more frequently.

when members have problems, it's very important that they find the pastor's door and mind open - really open- regardless of whether it's a business problem or a personal matter. Either one can impair people's ability to worship and serve. They'll feel better, and work better, if they have an opportunity to get their problems off their chests.

Make yourself available. Be interested. Keep in touch.

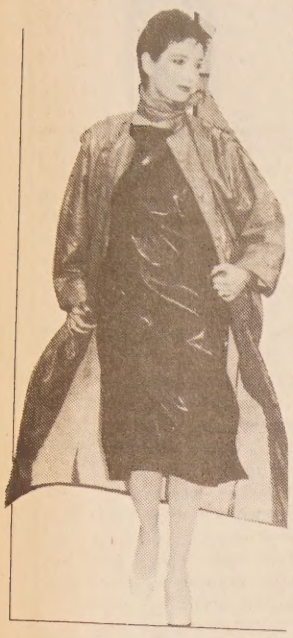
FASHIONS ENTERTAINMENT

New Raincoat Designs:



Ask a woman at any time of the year to name the most useful item in her wardrobe and the chances are, after shoes, she will say, "My raincoat."

Still spring is the time when most rainsoats are purchased, in deference to the proverbial showers of April, and also because of the need for a good light weight coat that can go over spring clothes.

The crop of raincoats for this year is stronger than usual, and the magic word is "plastic." cotton, polyester and even silk fabrics are backed with polyurethane and in some cases threads are wound with rubber, all of which adds to the impermeable quality of the new coats.

It also gives tham a high shine, which is especially attractive in the fresh colors that dominate the raincoat offerings.

'Crisis' Dates For Kool And the Gang

Robert "Kool" Bell, left, and James Taylor of the group Kool and the ..ng.

"Emergency," the title tune on the latest album from Kool and the Gang, describes a "serious love reaction." The group's lead vocalist, James Taylor, pleads, "I need your love . . . this is an emergency." But this isn't the only emergency the nine-man group from Jersey City is concerned with. "There's a real emergency, a crisis in American education," says the group's bassist and spokesman, Robert (Kool) Bell. "And the United Negro College Fund is trying to do something about it."

Next Monday and Jan. 9, Kool and the Gang are performing at Avery Fisher Hall, with proceeds going to the fund. McDonald's hamburger empire is sponsoring the concert and promoting it heavily, and Polygram, the group's record label, is donating 50 cents to the fund for each copy of "Emergency" purchased in New York-area stores this month.

The support of a group as popular as Kool and the Gang, who have placed more hit singles in the Top 40 than any other band of the 1980's, can give an organization like the United Negro College Fund a substantial lift. Kool and the Gang have also helped raise funds for the March of Dimes, the fight against muscular dystrophy, food relief for famine victims in Ethiopia, and other colleges in recent years. "We feel we have an obligation to do these things," Mr. Bell said, "that it's really important to give something back to the community, to the people who helped put us where we are today."

Life is sweet these days for Kool and the Gang. The group has had 16 hit singles in the Top 40 since its beginnings, and the 1980's have been its best years yet, with five gold albums in a row and records at the top of the charts in Britain and other countries as well. One of the group's 1980's hits, "Celebration," has become a kind of standard; it was played to welcome the hostages home from Iran, and was often heard at the Olympics.

But some of the group's longtime fans were distressed at the direction the band's music seemed to be taking during the last few years. Kool and the Gang had always been a dance band first. Its early hits, including "Jungle Boogie," "Funky Stuff" and "Hollywood Swinging," were definitive party music, and an important rhythmic influence on contemporary rock and funk. But in the late 1970's, the group brought in an outside producer, the Brazilian pop-jazz musician Deodato, who gave their records a smoother sound, closer to the pop mainstream.

"We have gone through quite a few musical changes," said Mr. Bell, whose sincere, soft-spoken manner is hardly what one would expect from a musician named Kool. "We've been together now for 20 years, making records for 16, and our career has been up, down, up again. After our funky hits in the mid-70's, we had a rough period. People thought the group had broken up. Disco was very big at the time, and we couldn't sell records, which is ironic, because our music has been danceable since our first record."

The glittery, superficial trappings of much disco music were anathema to Kool and the Gang; the band had always relied on its musical craftsmanship and has never been flashy or trendy. During the disco years, when every other base player seemed to be popping strings with his thumb, the musical equivalent of shouting "Hey, look at me," Kool continued to be the pop equivalent of a jazz bassist like Ron Carter. He gets a big sound and anchors the music with simple lines that are solid as a rock.

The band did two things in a successful attempt to get out of its disco slump. It brought in Deodato to streamline its sound, and for the first time it added a new member, James (J. T.) Taylor, a lead singer with romantic sensitivity and a soulful edge. "We had never had a real lead singer, and couldn't perform a lot of the tunes we wrote," says Mr. Bell. "J. T. has made a big difference."

The four albums that followed included the huge hits "Joanna" and "Celebration." But when it was time to begin working on their latest album, Deodata was not used; instead, the band basically produced itself.

"We just wanted to take a different approach this time," says Mr. Bell. "People come and see our live show, and they see us stretching out, improvising, with more of a jazz feel than our records usually have. A lot of the letters that come into our fan club have been asking why we don't record a live album, or just stretch out more on our records, and we decided to do that on 'Emergency.' It's something within us that we want to get out."

Kool and the Gang were originally known as the Jazziacs and influenced heavily by the saxophonist John Coltrane. The most extended song on the "Emergency" album, "You Are the One," is a kind of gospel-jazz, with lyrics praising the Creator and a lyrical saxophone solo from Robert Bell's brother, Ronald. Other songs on the album, especially the current hit single "Misled," find the band evolving in a more rock-oriented direction, with powerful electric guitar riffs and a crunching rhythm. On the whole, "Emergency" is the most consistently exciting Kool and the Gang album in a number of years. Its hard edge and masterly mixture of rock, jazz and dance rhythms are particularly welcome after the more homogenized albums produced by Deodato.

AN AFRICAN-AMERICAN HOLIDAY

As the curtains roll back, white-clad youngsters, chanting Zaminamina (a work song), solemnly file onto center stage and mill around the kinara (candle holder). The mshumaa (candle) is lit and libation is poured as a symbol of communication between the living, the ancestors and the generations to come. The officiating elder steps forward to declare open the climax of the seven-day celebration of kwanza, an African-American holiday observed each year from December 26 to January 1.

Kwanza (the word comes from the Kiswali phrase matunda ya kwanza, which means "the first fruits') is an event based on traditional African harvest of the first crops. Celebrated by the black community across the nation, it's an occasion for thanksgiving (to departed ancestors) to insure a good harvest for the next year,

This week's first prize Jackpot:

Lotto

You could win thousands, even millions, when you play Lotto, the new game from the Washington State Lottery. Because the jackpot grows 'til somebody wins! It's fun to play, and it's easy.

How to play.

Pick up a free Lotto play slip at any On-Line Games Agent. The play slip is divided into 10 games, each with a field of numbers from 1 to 40.

Decide how many games you want to play. You play two games for a dollar, and can play up to 10 games on a single play slip. The minimum play is one dollar.

Pick 6 numbers out of 40 for each game you play. Using pen or pencil (not red), mark the 6 numbers you've selected on the play slip for each game. Games must be played in pairs. You receive two games for each $1 played.

Hand the completed play slip to your On-Line Agent. The agent will enter it into the Ticket Distribution Machine, which will print out a Lotto ticket showing the numbers you selected, the drawing date, and the amount you played. The agent will return your play slip for possible future use.

Check your ticket. It is your responsibility to check your Lotto ticket to make sure it corresponds with the numbers you selected. Be sure to keep your ticket until after that week's drawing, as proof of purchase.

Quick Play option. If you prefer, the On-Line computer will randomly select six numbers for each game you wish to play. Just tell the Agent you want a "Quick Play" and state how many games you're playing.

How much you can win.

Evergreen Lotto is a parimutuel game, so the size of the jackpot depends upon how many people play. If more than one person wins, they share the Jackpot equally. The Lottery guarantees that the cash value of the First Prize Jackpot will be at least $500,000, no matter how many people play.

It could grow into the millions—all for the person (or to be divided equally among the persons) who match in any order all 6 winning numbers.

The second prize share is divided among all players who match 5 out of 6 winning numbers in any order and the third prize share is divided among all those who match 4 out of 6 winning numbers in any order. These prizes are determined by total Lotto sales and number of winners each week.

All prizes with a cash value of $250,000 or more will be paid in the form of a multiple-year annuity.

How to collect your prize.

Winning amounts will be announced to the public through the media and On-Line Sales Agents every Monday at 9 a.m. Prizes of up to $600 can be collected at any On-Line location. Winners of larger amounts must file a claim form with the Lottery. Forms are available from any Lottery Agent.

ST. MATTHEW 13:24 & 33

Another parable put he forth unto them, saying unto them, saying, The Kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field:

But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way.

but when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?

He said unto them, an enemy hath done this.

The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

Let both grow together until the harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn.

Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, the Kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took and sowed in his field:

Dream Keeper Speaks At Center

New York actor John S. Patterson will bring his one-man show "The Dream Keeper Speaks' to the King County Juvenile Detention Center on Tuesday, January 8, at 1:30 p.m.

According to Perry Wilkens, Director of the king County Department of Youth Service, Patterson's appearance at the detention center is made possible by the Department of Youth Service in conjunction with the King County Library Services and the Seattle Public Schools.

Patterson, the artist, is very enthusiastic about opportuities to expose today's youth to the work of America's best known black poet, Langston Hughes. "Langston's writing carries a strong spiritual message, but is never dull or pompus. Hope, imagination, acceptance of self and of others are the themes which weave their way through his blues and boogie-woogie poems as well as his more serious political pieces. in a time when entertainment is a dominant force in young people's value formation, langston Hughes' work is very nearly a necessity."

For more information about "The Dream Keeper Speaks: The World of Langston Hughes," call the Broadway Performances Hall at 587-4166.

New York Has A Death Wish

The real Charles Bronson came to New York last week and the law of the jungle caught up with the law (and order) of New York.

Bronson, you may remember, in "Death Wish" played a liberal architect who turned into a cold-blooded executioner of New York's worst -- the young and abusive thugs who control the streets and public facilities.

On one of New York's filthy subway trains during the Christmas holidays, a White man about six-feet tall, according to witnesses, was accosted by a group of young Black men who tried to rob him.

After responding that one of the alleged assailants resembled someone who had robbed him before, the man opened fire with a silver-plated pistol. Four were felled by his bullets. All will live, but one, a 19-year old, will never walk again.

New Yorkers, victims in their own homes and afraid to establish eye contact with abusive hoodlums on buses and subways, largely cheered the shooting of the four -- all of whom were carrying sharpened screwdrivers at the time of the shooting.

"He did a great job," someone said. "I hope he gets away. People have to start taking things into their own hands," remarked another. Of a thousand calls to the police "not one call was against the vigilante," confessed a cop. "He should run for mayor," another exclaimed.

The mayor, His Honor Edward Koch, was busy saying the opposite. In classic outrage at injustice, the mayor ordered 1,350 police rookies down into the bottomless pit of the city's foul subways.

He proclaimed that "riders on our transit system should not be endangered by such violence." One cannot only help but wonder why the mayor had not ordered such massive help -- permanently -- for the permanently "endangered" who must endure the hell of his subways every day?

Koch, in what seemed like pandering to Blacks because the perpetrator-victims were Black also promised that "riders on our transit system should not be endangered by such violence."

"Vigilantism," Mayor Koch said emphatically, "will not be tolerated in this city. We are not going to have instant justice meted out by anybody." If the mayor and new York's fictional "finest" police corps cannot stop -- or even slow down -- crime, how can he stop vigilantism? He can't.

The city, faced with judges who should be locked up because of who they refuse to lock up and prosecutors who practice plea bargaining in place of law, is rebelling. It was inevitable.

It was also sad that a young man will never walk again. But crime does not pay. And a public pushed to the brink will rebel, the liberal prostations of elected officials notwithstanding.

The father of one of the young men blamed racism, naturally, for the popularity of the "Death Wish" gunman. "When Black people get shot by a White man ... that's what people will say ... that they were about to rob someone."

First of all, I'm not about to believe that four Black men with police records and sharpened screwdrivers were "requesting" money form a lone White man in the subway jungle of New York. The vigilante is popular, not because he is White, but because he acted out the frustrations of most New Yorkers.

Roy Innis of CORE offered to pay the gunman's legal fees "if he'll turn himself in."

"I don't want the White people of this city to think that the Blacks stand behind the hoodlums. This thing cuts across racial lines."

THE HONORABLE GUS SAVAGE
Member of Congress

On Sunday, November 11, less than a week after the national elections, a special panel of American Catholic bishops issued its long-awaited analysis of the nation's economy. For a few days at least, the contents of that document rivaled the election itself as a topic of discussion.

Entitled "Catholic Social Teaching and the U.S. Economy," the 50,000 word letter declared that current levels of unemployment in the U.S., are "morally unjustified"; that widespread poverty in this country is a "disgrace" and a "scandel", totally unbecoming one of the wealthiest naitons in the world. Quite predictably, the proposed pastoral letter evoked strong negative reaction in corporate board rooms across the nations, and similar responses could be fould in some conservative quarters of the Catholic church.

While finding little fault with its contents, liberals and progressives widely denounced the timing of the letter's release, contending it should have been made public prior to the election when it could have made a "political difference." They say had it been issued before November 6, the letter's strong position on economic justice just might have counter-balanced the bishops strong public opposition to abortion-- something that assumed drumbeat proportions as the day for going to the polls drew near.

In the eyes of many, the bishops elevated the rhetoric over the abortion issue and conveniently choose to ignore broader social concerns, thus putting the Catholic Church in league with Reagan and right-wing evangelicals. The draft statement will undergo at least two more revisions before becoming an official policy of the National Council of Catholic Bishops, the group that oversees the 52-million-member Roman Catholic church in the U.S. But just what was contained in the pastoral letter that made it such a point of contention? Here are some pertinent quotes:

"As pastors and citizens we are convinced of one fundamental criterion for economic decisions, policies and stipulations: They must all be at the service of human beings. The economy was made for people, all people, and not the other way around."

"The country is doing far less than it might to generate employment, and it shows no sign of making full-scale commitment to this goal. As moral teachers our first responsibility is to call for a change in direction, for the formation of a new national consensus that overcoming unemployment is at the top of the nation's economic agenda."

"In our judgment, the distribution of income and wealth in the U.S. is so inequitable that it violates...minimum standards of distributive justice." If our nation is to rise to the challenges before it, we shall have to see a significantly increased level of collaboration and cooperation among the many economic factors in our society.

A very strong document, so progressive that Carl T. Rowan stated in his nationally syndicated column: "I cannot resist observing that portions of this letter read as if they were plagiarized from the Democratic convention speech of Rev. Jesse Jackson. Which is to say that the letter is morally courageous and compelling..."

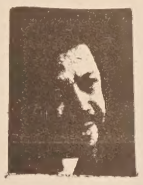
Why, then, did the Bishops wait until after the election to release their statement? Archbishop Rembert Weakland of Milwaukee, chairman of the panel preparing the letter, speaking on the Today Show the Monday following the letter's release, said they "made the decision more than a year ago," so it wouldn't appear they were trying to influence the election. But, of course, their primary purpose should have been to do exactly that. If the things they wanted to say had important political implications, then it was a dereliction of duty not to say them in what they knew would be one of the most political climates in this country this century.

Can one take seriously the commitment of fighters who shoulder their weapons precisely when the shooting starts?

In another sense, the Bishops acted as though their pronouncements were of no more importance than a statement on the state of baseball before the World Series, and could therefore, just as well be withheld until after the games were played.

In the draft letter, the bishops call upon the Catholic Church to work for "genuine policy objectives rather than mere pious wishes." It is hoped that between now and the time the letter becomes official policy, the bishops develop the strength to become spirited fighters for their own statements.

If not, their after-the-fact actions will prove to be just as important as their before-the-fact decision, when they concluded that any document they authored would be too controversial to be permitted to create waves in election-year waters.



To Be Equal
By John Jacob

MAKING 1985 A BETTER YEAR

Racial polarization and growing alienation are part of the heritage of the national withdrawal from tackling America's social and economic inequities. The atmosphere has become more strained over the past four years because of higher black poverty levels and by the perception that the Administration doesn't care about black hopes and aspirations.

That perception has been challenged by key figures in the Administration. But in the absence of policies that draw blacks into the mainstream and demonstrate fairness to all, those disclaimers have not made headway.

so 1985 looms as a crucial year. It can be a significantly better year year for black Americans if the President firmly decides that he will take steps to convince black citizens that their perception of his Administration should be changed.

This can be done even without the massive job programs and improved social welfare programs that are at the top of the black agenda and which must be implemented if blacks are to have the opportunities to make it into the mainstream.

For starters, the President could lay down the law to his Administration's officials that they cool the rhetoric. Some top officials have made ill-tempered attacks on black leaders who reflect the opinions of their constituents. Others have been polarizing influences through their refusal to enforce civil rights laws.

Another positive would be for the White House to open chanels of communication with blacks. This is the first Administration in memory in which the President and his key advisors do not have regular contacts with representative black leadership. Still another step would be to pass enterprise zones legislation, a worthwhile experiment that should be tried. although the Administration first floated the idea, it has not fought for it as strongly as it fights for cuts in social programs.

Perhaps the most positive step the President could fight for right now is elimination of taxation of poor people. Many of the working poor pay higher taxes than the affluent who benefitted from the Administration's tax cuts.

The Treasury's new tax reform plan would do away with taxes on the poor. Whatever the merits of the rest of the plan, this feature should be made the centerpiece of the Administration's economic program in 1985.

A related step would be to restore planned cuts in social programs. they have already been cut far more than is fair or reasonable and unless the President leaves these programs untouched in the budget process he can never win even a minimum of black support.

A reappraisal of U.S. policy toward South Africa would also help change perceptions. The administration's friendship with a racist regime whose policies offend the moral sensibilities of the civilized world, should change to a tougher attitude toward South Africa, with sanctions that punish its inhuman behavior.

Finally, the Administration has shown little interest in working closely with the voluntary sector. I suggest the President convene a White House conference of agencies that deal with America's jobless, homeless and hungry to determine how current federal programs can be improved through closer partnership with the voluntary sector.

If the President follows through on these suggestions he can win the respect of those who disagree with his broad policies, while ensuring that 1985 is a year that defuses the dangerous polarization in our land.

Your Weekly Spinal Column.

By Doctor Gordon Rody.

Health Comes From Within...

Chiropractic works with natural means.

It puts nothing new into the body and does not remove any natural gland or organ.

Chiropractic releases life forces within the body, sets free rivulets of energy over nerves, and lets nature do her work in a normal manner.

Chiropractors know that all trunk nerves are branches from spinal cord, and these nerve bundles make exit through grooves between joints of spine.

For that reason, spine must be in normal alignment, or displaced vertebrae will squeeze on nerve trunks, interrupt passage of energy over nerves, and thus lower resistance. This is forerunner of dis-ease.

By locating and adjusting the cause of dis-ease chiropractors set free nature's forces. Nothing else is required, because nature knows what should be done, and once her channels are free, she does her work well.

IF YOU WANT TO REACH A GOAL

It takes a little courage and a little self-control
And some grim determination if you want to reach a goal;
It takes a deal of striving and a firm and stern set chin,
No matter what the battle, if you're really out to win.
There is a rule of life to guide you as you seek prosperity:
Never put your wishbone where your backbone ought to be!
